PREFACE

Our journey to understand and document customer and company interaction tools in the age of customized products and services continues and we proudly present this Configurator Database Report 2019/20 to you. We decided to systematically collect and analyze web-based product configurators in 2007 and started the Configurator Database Research Project. In 2019 and 2020 we were able to identify 1400 product configurators that are accessible online for the interested user. Behind this continuously growing number of real online cases we identify processes of change that shape the field of mass customization: customizable products arrive on stage at an even faster pace than in the years ago.

We are happy if this report serves as a reference book for you to get an overview about the wide range of applied product configurators, a product world in which individual needs and expectations are embedded as part of the product experience.

With the Configurator Database Report 2013 we tried to shed light on the status quo of web-based product configurators and analyzed 900 of these with a special focus on social media integration. But we learned that this could only be a snapshot in time with fan participation numbers in steady flow. In 2014 we reframed the report idea and focused on a listing of product configurators with maximal possible completeness, finding a total number of 970 and making this wealth of creative and innovative solutions accessible for the interested mind by structuring it according to industries, highlighting the offered products and having a look at the origin of the companies behind these configurators. We continued this approach in 2015 with 1050 configurators. For the Configurator Database Report 2016 we rechecked the listed configurators in the Configurator Database, made new screenshots, updated the entries and discovered a total number of 1200 web-based configurators. In the Configurator Database Report 2017/18 we updated the configurator status-quo and had a particular look on which configurator user interfaces are responsive. In a customer world where users start favoring mobile devices as access to company and product information the use of configuration screen space possibilities needs to get more attention. And now in the Configurator Database Report 2019/20 we reboiled all the activities and research approaches to get a fresh look at the changes in the world of individuality.

We hope this report proves to be helpful for you. In case you want to share comments and findings, please contact us: report@configurator-database.com

EMBRACING THE EXPERIENCE OF INDIVIDUALITY

by Paul Blazek & Georg Strassmayr & Simone Honetz & Fridolin Pöschl

INTRODUCTION

Mass customization is on the rise

We see more and more indications that the ideas of mass customization are being adopted by the general public, both on the business side as well as the consumer side. Google search queries including the term “configurator” have peaked in 2020, despite or because of the global corona pandemic. And, as part of their “Fast Forward” series, The New York Times devoted an entire article to the advantages and impact that mass customization can have on start-ups and established companies alike.

“More and more industries and companies are joining the mass-customization bandwagon. Many are niche manufacturers and start-ups, unencumbered by expensive legacy factories and supply chains. Others are big brands that have added customization options to extend their product lines and increase sales.” - Aviva Freudmann, The New York Times

It seems that mass customization is gaining traction again. This positive development can be looked at from two angles: firstly, it means that new technologies, methods and service understandings are developed faster; secondly, it indicates that with growing competition, companies employing product configurators sooner than later will face the same challenges e-commerce has had for the past decade: simply “having a configurator” won’t do the job any longer.

An “okay” experience is no longer good enough

At least for most consumer-oriented companies, a product configurator is just one - albeit integral - part of the online shopping experience. Thus, mass customization companies have to take a look at the experience as a whole: When we think about our experiences as a customer interacting with a business, what comes to mind is an overall gut feeling, not separate feelings along points in a customer journey.

Also core success factors with a focus on the configuration system itself in B2C markets are for example providing an appropriate user interface which is easy to understand, allows intuitive handling, gives support in navigating through complex choice sets and guides users to the fitting solution. These factors combined with fun in operating and a well defined solution space lead to a sustainable process satisfaction of the customer [Piller/Blazek 2014].

In a study conducted almost two decades ago researchers found that 75% of consumers admit that they judge a business’ credibility based on their website design [Fogg 2002]. And since configurators are part of the website, their design will also have an influence on the perceived credibility.

The same way web design knowledge has to be applied to e-commerce solutions, e-commerce knowledge has to be applied to mass customization solutions. This understanding is key because it translates to higher performance which leads to better return on investment.

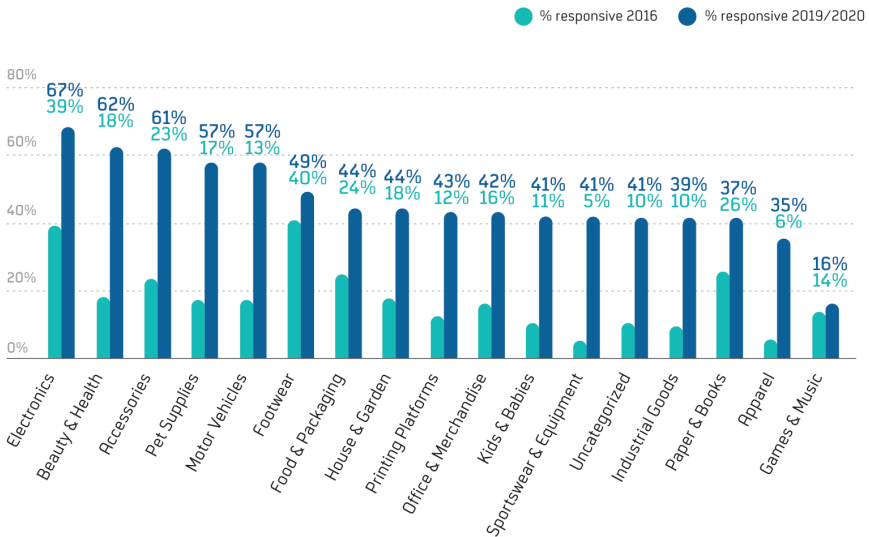

The industry is adapting already

As the mobile usage per day in general is rising, Gen Y, persons born between 1980 and 2000, are the first generation which favors mobile to desktop devices (Blazek/Piisl 2018).

One good indicator that the industry is evolving and adapting new technologies and practices already is the rate of responsive configurators in the Configurator Database. 46% of all configurators listed in this 2019/20 report are responsive, as compared to only 20% back in 2016. This large increase shows that more companies are taking their customer's needs seriously. But with not even half of all configurators adapting to different screen dimensions, there still lies massive potential to fulfill customer needs in terms of mobile access.

A per-industry comparison shows that there are also great differences between industry clusters. Electronics, which is now more than ever powered by and striving for leaps in technological progress, has the highest percentage of responsive configuration solutions, followed by typical consumer facing industries such as Beauty & Health, Accessories and Pet Supplies.

Although the device optimization seems to become a more crucial success factor, new technologies such as virtual and artificial reality could be key enablers for a superior customization experience in certain industries.

About the Configurator Database

We launched The Configurator Database Project back in 2007 with the purpose of providing a research resource for the scientific mass customization community as well as enabling an easy first step into the field of mass customization for interested persons. Since then, a lot has changed in how we as societies and as consumers interact with the internet and its new enabling technologies for mass customization. This is why we also need to think about providing more insights and data in future Configurator Database Reports and are currently assessing new data types to be gathered in our surveys. If you have suggestions on what data or analyses you would like to see in future Configurator Database Reports or if you would like to contribute to the Configurator Database Project, we are inviting you to reach out to us.

About the report

Starting in 2007 the Configurator Database (www.configurator-database.com) covered 600 online configurators. Since then it has been extended constantly. In 2013 the first Configurator Database Report was published including 900 configurators, in 2014 the second one including 970 configurators. The Configurator Database Report 2015 reached a new milestone: more than 1000 online configurators could be identified and at the end 1050 configurators were listed in the report. The 2017/18 edition covered a span of two years with 1250 configurators.

The aim of this Configurator Database Report 2019/20 is to provide a printed documentation of the interaction tools used in the field of mass customization by companies to interact with their customers. It displays 1400 online configurators.

MEASURES & EVALUATIONS

General information

Based on our knowledge and experience concerning mass customization solutions, an evaluation system was developed and implemented in June 2012. The configurators' quality is not rated or judged, but with the collected quantitative statistics of 1400 configurators, some findings about configurators in the field of mass customization could be achieved.

In this report an excerpt of the gathered statistics is presented, namely the data concerning offered products, industry categorization and the country of origin of the customization brand.

Industries of the Configurator Database

As in the graphic below, the highest number of configurators can be found in the field of House & Garden with 254 listed entries, followed by Accessories and Apparel with each 163 listed entries.

Industry ranking in the Configurator Database (n=1400)

Product

Most companies offer a single product which can be modified according to the exact needs of the customer, others offer different products. If a company’s website offers more products, we aggregated them into product group terms like giftware or photo products.

The graphic below shows that the most popular products for mass customization are cars, t-shirts, shirts, bicycles and rings. Besides these, there are also a lot of unusual products like chimneys, aquariums, monopoly boards, etc. which occur only once in the database.

CLOSING WORDS

By analyzing 1400 websites providing configurators a large number of facts concerning the industries and the offered products were identified.

Looking at the big variety of configurable products we see the relevance of configurators within all industries. Mass customization gives many possibilities and in almost all industries it makes sense to think about offering a product configurator for customer interaction.

Nevertheless the gathered statistics on the dynamic changes in the mass customizers' landscape also stress that there is no guarantee for steady success. A close monitoring of the market and an adaption of the own configurator space to deliver the perfect fit for the customer's needs are more important than ever.
